

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

EAST ASIAN STUDIES CENTER

2024 THE INSTITUTE FOR KOREAN STUDIES PRESENTS:

"SERVICE-LEARNING IN KOREAN: COMMUNITY-ENGAGED TEACHING AND RESEARCH"

SUNG-OCK SOHN

University of California, Los Angeles

This presentation discusses the implementation and effects of community service-learning (SL) in the pedagogical context of Korean as a Second/Foreign Language (KSL) at higher institutions in N. America. Specifically, I address the following two questions. 1) How does service-learning help students in Korean classes make connections between their knowledge acquired from class setting and their use of the language in authentic setting? 2) In what ways does service-learning enhance Korean language learners' socio-cultural awareness and foster their cultural identity? Community-engaged research/teaching encompasses collaborative research or creative work with community partners that addresses social inequalities or public issues. We are particularly interested in seeing applications for community-engaged work in the Los Angeles area, though proposals for work anywhere in the US or globally will be given full consideration.

26
MARCH
Tuesday
4:00-5:30pm
Hagerty Hall 351

Free and open to the public

<https://easc.osu.edu/events/iks-lecture-sung-ock-sohn>

This event is sponsored by a U.S. Department of Education Title VI grant to
The Ohio State University East Asian Studies Center